2. The second part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are derived from the principles of relativity and quantum theory.

3. The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are derived from the principles of relativity and quantum theory.

4. The fourth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are derived from the principles of relativity and quantum theory.

1836-1930

To understand the nature of a personality, it is necessary to realize that its make-up is determined by forces deeply rooted in the past. Personality does not develop in a vacuum. It must have both an hereditary basis and an environment that nurtures it. Grandfather's quality of intelligence, his long span of life, and his more than ninety years of rather good health speak significantly of a good hereditary background. The Mennonite-way-of-life, in which Grandfather lived his whole life, furnished an interesting, fertile soil for its growth and development.

Grandfather's Forebears

His Great-grandfather. In 1803, a Johann Harder, Grandfather's own great-grandfather, migrated with his family from Marienburg, a region in East Prussia, to the Russian Ukraine. This Harder family was one among one-hundred and sixty-two families that emigrated in the summer of 1803. Most of these colonists were rather well-to-do farmers. After paying the ten percent emigration tax, they still had enough capital left with which to stock up their new farms. Only a small minority had to accept the help of the Russian Government offered poor immigrants. In July, 1804, his great-grandfather arrived with his family in the newly established Mennonite settlement on the Molotschna River. He built his home in the village of Blumstein and bought farm #16. He died in 1826. There were five children born into this family, Johann (Grandfather's grandfather), Abraham, Elizebeth, and another daughter whose name has not been recorded anywhere.

His Grandfather. Grandfather's grandfather, also Johann Harder, was seventeen years old when his parents migrated to the Molotschna Colony in 1803. Being the oldest son, he inherited the family estate at Blumstein. His first wife was Elizebeth Platt, who bore him six children, Johann (Grandfather's father), Abraham, Isbrand, Elizebeth, Helena, and Peter. After her death, Grandfather's grandfather married Katharina Mandler, who bore him two children, Isbrand and Maria.

His Father. Grandfather's father was born on September 15, 1811, in the Harder home in Blumstein. Being the oldest son, he came into possession of the family estate. His father was thus the third Johann Harder to make his living on farm #16. Grandfather's father also was married twice. In October 9, 1834, he married Justina Schulz, who had grown up in the village of Friedensdorf. To this union, 11 children were born. These were in order of birth: Justina, Johann (Grandfather), Justina, Abraham, Isbrand, Helena, Heinrich, Heinrich, David, Elizebeth, and Justina. His wife, Justina, died March 8, 1856.

In July of that same year his father married Katharina Schulz, who according to Grandfather's own records was born in August 18, 1839. If this date of birth is correct, Katharina Schulz was not only 28 years younger than her husband but also younger than three of her new step-children. She became the mother of seven children, Katharina, Agnes, Anna, Jacob, Jacob, Bernhard, and Bernhard.

Although Grandfather's father had eighteen children, the high rate of infant mortality of that day swept a surprising number into early graves. Modern medical skills would have prevented much of the waste of babies so common several generations ago. It is interesting to note, too, that the same given names were used again and again. For example, the name, Justina, appears three times among Grandfather's sisters. None of them reached the age of ten years.

It would be quite unfair to Grandfather's father if I didn't point out the very significant role he played in Mennonite history in Russia. In 1860, he was ordained as elder in the large Orloff-Halbstadt Mennonite Church. As elder he demonstrated such fine leadership during a period of great religious controversy that the Mennonite Church in Russia was preserved partly through his efforts and wisdom. Historical accounts of the unlovely religious feud that threatened to destroy the Mennonite Church during the sixties contains the name of Elder Johann Harder again and again as the great champion of tolerance.

And Now the Biography

It is rather difficult to write an adequate biography of a person when available information is rather limited. Grandfather left a few written accounts of his life, but they are so devoid of details. Naturally, he was not trained or disposed to give a journalistic or a historical account of his experiences. One looks in vain for little human interest stories that add so much color and meaning to a biography. The person writing a biography of Grandfather Harder must put a few small pieces together and attempt to construct the whole picture.

to the Molotchka Colony of Mennonites. According to the Russian calendar of that time, he was born on August 8, 1836. Translated to the American calendar, he was born on August 20, 1836. As mentioned earlier in this biography, his father was the well known elder of the Orloff Mennonite Church.

Grandfather spent his boyhood somewhat under frontier conditions. High cultural and spiritual ideals were not generally emphasized. Not only the schools but the total life of the colony offered too little that was socially and intellectually constructive. On Sunday mornings boys and girls listened to rather lengthy sermons that were read from books. The Sunday afternoons, holidays, and many weekday evenings were spent in revelry. There were no planned, wholesome activities to absorb the time and energies of youth. Smoking and drinking were all too common among the boys. Shady stories and wild pranks helped to fill the idle hours. It seems that Grandfather was different. He does not seem to have been involved in that kind of life. Never have I heard anyone refer to youthful escapades of Grandfather. His Godly parents and his religious inclinations seemingly kept him free from such sinful experiences.

His education was obtained at a small village school in Blumstein. The quality of instruction throughout the colony was not very encouraging. Grandfather seems to have spent one year from home attending the school conducted by the gifted preacher and teacher, Bernhard Harder, his father's uncle. There is no record indicating that he attended one of the Centralschulen (high school) that were being organized at that time in various Mennonite settlements.

In November 16, 1858, Grandfather married Elizabeth Fast, daughter of Johann Fast, a teacher at Schönan. Soon after his marriage, Grandfather moved to the village of Friedensruh, where he taught the village school for three years. Then he moved to the village of Schönan, where he taught another four years.

Transplanted to the Crimea. By 1850, population pressure had become an economic problem for the Mennonites in Russia. The rapid increase in population and the government provision that the entire estate must pass intact to a single member of the family upon the death of the former owner, worked a hardship upon those members who did not share the land inheritance. Had Grandfather inherited the estate at Blumstein he would have been the fourth Johann Harder to live there. Evidently his father was unable or unwilling to retire, thus forcing Grandfather to make his living elsewhere.

A solution of this problem was sought quite early in the purchase of daughter colonies as an outlet for the surplus population. The first daughter community was established in the Crimea in 1862 by a group of Molotchka landseekers who first became acquainted with the fields about Simferopol while engaged in transporting the wounded from the battlefields to their Molotchka homes during the Crimean War.

In the spring of 1865, Grandfather moved his growing family to the Crimea where he bought a small farm. The little village of Axtenfeld became his home for the next nine years. The first few years were difficult with the usual problems confronted in any pioneer situation. But after having become familiar with the climate and soil in the Crimea, he began to prosper. Nine years later, in 1874, he was able to sell out with considerable profit and emigrate to America.

When Grandfather and Grandmother and the two oldest children moved into the Crimea, they joined a small group of Mennonites that met in various homes to sing, pray, and search the scriptures for more insight and understanding of God's Word. As mentioned earlier in this biography, this was the time that the Mennonite Church in Russia had reached a low point in its spiritual life. Grandfather, too, was concerned with living a more Christian life. And with his friends, he sought to find it.

In 1869, Jacob A. Wiebe, a former elder in the Kleine Gemeinde in the Crimea, invited all those interested in greater spiritual life into a new church fellowship. Convinced, according to God's Word that baptism by immersion was most Biblical, the Grandparents and seventeen others were rebaptized by Wiebe. Then they proceeded to organize a new Mennonite denomination that is still known as the Krimmer Mennonite Brethren Church. In 1871, Grandfather was elected to the ministry and assistant to Elder Jacob A. Wiebe.

Migration to America. Among the written records that Grandfather left behind, his description of the journey to America is the most complete. But even here one looks in vain for the reasons for the migration. He simply begins by saying, "We drove to the depot . . ."

By 1870, it had become quite clear to the Mennonites in Russia that the Russian Government was reversing its policy towards the Mennonites, particularly the issue of military exemption. Realizing that Russia would not long remain a place of religious freedom, more than ten thousand made preparations to seek a new land. In 1874, the whole Krimmer Mennonite Brethren Church migrated from the Crimea to the plains of central Kansas. The journey began on May 30, 1874 and ended at Peabody, Kansas, August 26 of the same year. The name of the ship upon which they crossed the Atlantic was the S. S. City of Brooklyn.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry, no matter how small, should be recorded to ensure the integrity of the financial data. This includes not only sales and purchases but also expenses and income. The document states that a single missing entry could lead to significant discrepancies in the final accounts.

2. The second part of the document outlines the procedures for recording transactions. It provides a step-by-step guide on how to enter data into the accounting system. It starts with identifying the transaction, then determining the appropriate accounts to debit and credit, and finally recording the amount. The document also includes a section on how to handle corrections and adjustments, ensuring that any errors are promptly identified and rectified.

3. The third part of the document discusses the importance of regular reconciliation. It explains that accounts should be reconciled at least once a month to ensure that the recorded balances match the actual balances. This process involves comparing the accounting records with bank statements and other external sources. The document provides a detailed explanation of how to perform a reconciliation, including how to identify and resolve any differences.

4. The fourth part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining proper documentation. It states that every transaction should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. These documents serve as evidence of the transaction and are essential for auditing purposes. The document also provides guidelines on how to store and organize these documents, ensuring that they are easily accessible when needed.

5. The fifth part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry, no matter how small, should be recorded to ensure the integrity of the financial data. This includes not only sales and purchases but also expenses and income. The document states that a single missing entry could lead to significant discrepancies in the final accounts.

6. The sixth part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry, no matter how small, should be recorded to ensure the integrity of the financial data. This includes not only sales and purchases but also expenses and income. The document states that a single missing entry could lead to significant discrepancies in the final accounts.

7. The seventh part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. 8. The eighth part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry, no matter how small, should be recorded to ensure the integrity of the financial data. This includes not only sales and purchases but also expenses and income. The document states that a single missing entry could lead to significant discrepancies in the final accounts.

9. The ninth part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry, no matter how small, should be recorded to ensure the integrity of the financial data. This includes not only sales and purchases but also expenses and income. The document states that a single missing entry could lead to significant discrepancies in the final accounts.

10. The tenth part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry, no matter how small, should be recorded to ensure the integrity of the financial data. This includes not only sales and purchases but also expenses and income. The document states that a single missing entry could lead to significant discrepancies in the final accounts.

The first of these is the fact that the system is not self-sufficient. It is necessary to import a large quantity of raw materials from abroad, and this is a serious disadvantage. The second is that the system is not very flexible. It is not possible to change the system very easily, and this is a disadvantage in a world which is constantly changing. The third is that the system is not very efficient. It is not possible to produce goods very cheaply, and this is a disadvantage in a world which is constantly competing for the lowest prices. The fourth is that the system is not very popular. It is not possible to get the public to accept the system, and this is a disadvantage in a world which is constantly looking for better ways of doing things. The fifth is that the system is not very secure. It is not possible to protect the system from foreign competition, and this is a disadvantage in a world which is constantly looking for better ways of doing things. The sixth is that the system is not very adaptable. It is not possible to change the system to suit the needs of the world, and this is a disadvantage in a world which is constantly looking for better ways of doing things. The seventh is that the system is not very innovative. It is not possible to develop new products, and this is a disadvantage in a world which is constantly looking for better ways of doing things. The eighth is that the system is not very competitive. It is not possible to compete with the best of the world, and this is a disadvantage in a world which is constantly looking for better ways of doing things. The ninth is that the system is not very successful. It is not possible to achieve the goals of the system, and this is a disadvantage in a world which is constantly looking for better ways of doing things. The tenth is that the system is not very sustainable. It is not possible to maintain the system for a long time, and this is a disadvantage in a world which is constantly looking for better ways of doing things.

Pioneer Life in America. Elder Wiebe left his group at Elkhart, Indiana, for several weeks while he went ahead to Kansas to select a place for his group. After he had bought 12 sections of land from the Santa Fe Railroad Company at $3.00 an acre, he wrote to the group at Elkhart to come. Although most of the families in the group were extremely poor, even having borrowed the money for their transportation to America, Grandfather seems to have been more fortunate financially.

At first the whole Krimmer Mennonite Brethren Church, which came to America in a body under Elder Wiebe's leadership, attempted to transplant the village system of life so common in Russia. Two miles southeast of Hillsboro a site for a village called Grandman was selected. Then light board shanties were built, wells dug, and land prepared for the first winter wheat crop. Prices for various needed seed were high. Wheat was 70¢, corn $1.25, and potatoes sold for $2.00 per bushel. In 1885, Grandfather moved out of the village Grandman and settled upon his own farm as did most of the other families in the village. In America the village way of life was not practical.

Grandmother, too, was important. Grandmother must not be forgotten in this biography. Nothing is known of her girlhood. At the age of twenty, she married Grandfather. She seems to have possessed a delicate constitution. In Grandfather's writings there are many references to her illnesses. The many years of pioneer privations, first in Crimea and then in Kansas, put a great strain upon her limited strength. Then, too, it must be remembered that she gave birth to eleven children in a time when medical care, hospitals, and general knowledge of child care were very meager.

Eight years after coming to America, her eldest daughter, Elizebeth, married Jacob Klassen, leaving Grandmother alone with all her housework. Since her only other daughter, Helena, was but a mere child, Grandmother found herself unable to carry all of her responsibilities. One day when Grandfather was working in the yard with his seven boys, Grandmother prevailed upon her husband to assign one of the boys to help her regularly in the house. Grandfather consented to such an arrangement and her son David was promoted to housework.

In 1898, Grandmother died. She and Grandfather had lived together for forty years. At the time of her death, most of her children were married and all were grown up. Throughout her whole life she expressed saintly qualities. In one of his writings, Grandfather says, "She was an angel." The spiritual welfare of her children was of greatest importance to her.

A Journey to the "Old Country." Two years after Grandmother's death, Grandfather made a journey back to Russia. Having prospered sufficiently, he desired to still the deep yearning to see his brothers and sisters again. The privilege to return to Russia for a visit was not granted to very many of those who left it during the period of migration. While there, Grandfather met the widow, Renetta Schulz, whom he married in April, 1900. By marrying the widow Grandfather did not only have a new wife, but he became a step-father to her four young daughters.

Grandfather as a man. Grandfather never wrote a book, he perfected no invention, he created nothing in the arts. Grandfather's contribution to the world was his Christian life. He lived what he believed.

Grandfather was not perfect. He possessed certain weaknesses. I think one could say that he lacked keen sensitivity to the yearnings in other people's souls. He was not harsh, nor indifferent to the feelings of others. He just wasn't sensitive to them. Grandmother's nature was just a little too delicate for him. Then too, he was a little too patriarchal in his role of husband and father.

He manifested certain strong personality traits that must be pointed out. Among these, stability ranks high in the list. Grandfather possessed an even temperament. He was not driven to and fro by every current of opinion or belief. He was steadfast. Another personality trait that may be listed here was his ability to get along with everyone. Grandfather was never "acidy", nor inclined to argue with men. He lived in peace with his fellowmen.

In Conclusion. Grandfather died on February 23, 1930. He reached the age of 84 years. During these years he lived a "good life." His life is a good example for his children and children's children to follow. We who are his descendants have many reasons to be very proud of Grandfather Johann Harder.

This biography could have been and should have been more complete, but space in this book was too limited.

Dear Brothers, Sisters, Nephews and Nieces:

We received your letters and read them with great interest. I am very glad this correspondence in our family can go on in this way. We in our family are all well, happy, and of courage. Our daughter Irene with her two children are still living in our house. Wesley, her husband, is not yet discharged from the navy. Daughter Josephine and Bruce also live in our house, and are both working in the City Hospital. Miriam and Jimmie are still in Ottawa. I am, as before, an accountant for an Insurance Co. I like my work very well. My dear Kathryn is well and happy and tends to house duties. The weather in December has been very cold for over a week. Some nights 34 below zero. 1945 is now over and looking back we find very many things have happened and much history was made.

On the other side of this page I am briefly bringing a Family Record of our Ancestors. Our parents emigrated from Krimea, South Russia, to America and settled on the plains of Central Kansas in 1874 in the village "Gnadenau" of which you see a picture on the other side. To them 11 children were born, 8 boys and 3 girls. Five boys and 2 girls were born in South Russia and of them one girl died when yet an infant. In America twins were born twice. First 2 boys and of them one died when yet an infant. Second twins were one boy and one girl. The names of the children are John, Elizabeth I who died an infant, Elizabeth II, Abram, Isbrand, Henry, David, the twin brothers, Bernhard and Jacob. Jacob died in infancy. The other twins were a boy and a girl, Peter and Lena.

The first house in the picture of "Gnadenau" is our old home. The twin brothers and my twin sister and I were born there. Much work, poverty, sickness, and other hardships made the pioneer years very hard. With tears in her eyes our Mother has told us how hard it had been to nurse her last twins through their infant years. We read Psalm 121:5. "The Lord is thy keeper: the Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night." This Keeper did not slumber nor sleep over our old pioneer home. We 7 brothers and 2 sisters all grew up and the Lord cared for us, preserved us, and blessed us wonderfully. The Lord preserved our going out and our coming in, on the farm and in schools. You see their pictures on the other side. I am sorry the picture of our sister Elizabeth has not been available. You see the pictures of our Parents and our Grandparents. Next you see records of our Great Grandparents and Maternal Great Great Grandparents and one Great Great Great Grandfather born 1694--251 years ago.

In the year 1886 when I was 8 years, our parents moved with us out of the village "Gnadenau" and settled on a farm, the second picture on the other side. Today we look around and we find our parents, our sister Elizabeth, brother Abram, brother Isbrand, brother Henry and brother David are not here anymore. They have died and passed away. Only brother John, the oldest, and the 3 youngest--brother Bernhard, sister Lena, and I--are living. The village "Gnadenau" is no more. All the pioneer homes are gone. The buildings of our old farm are no more. The old fruit and orchard gardens are wiped from the ground. Looking ahead of us we have the promises of a heavenly home bright and fair, no death nor pain shall enter there. There we shall build houses and inhabit them, we shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them. We shall not labour in vain. Isaiah 65:21. My prayer is that our faith may be stronger, our hope brighter, and our love purer as we grow older. I pray to God that our whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. God be with you all.

II Thess. 5:23
